

TKE Simple Savings Account

Housing is universally accepted as being an important and an integral part of fraternities. Chapters with housing on average recruit more members and are more successful long term. In addition the camaraderie that is developed by living in the house is priceless. The most common question with housing is, "where should my chapter start?" The simple answer is save money. Many chapters do not have the luxury of an active alumni board and do not have any means to save and protect funds for a house. To help chapters in this situation Tau Kappa Epsilon has a simple house savings account. Coupled with a third party billing service (Greekbill or Omega Financial) this can be a very effective way of saving seed money for a new house.

Getting started with the savings account is easy. Simply fill out consent form and send a $300.00 check to get the account started. There are no fees with the account and no required deposits. The money is your chapter's money and it is simply protected by the Offices of the Grand Chapter for housing until your Alumni Board is better established and more organized to manage your chapter's housing money.
